DEBBIE, I HAVE A PROBLEM WITH INTIMACY - TONY
A 75-year study at Harvard University found one true key to a happy and fulfilling life...
Dr. George Vaillant’s two ingredients for a happy existence:

“finding a way of coping with life that does not push love away”
So, why is it that we push love away?
Fear of Intimacy

Interpersonal relationships are the ultimate source of happiness or misery. Love has the potential to generate intense pleasure and fulfillment or produce considerable pain and suffering.

- From Sex & Love in Intimate Relationships
What is the Fear of Intimacy?
What is the Fear of Intimacy?

Most people say that they are seeking love, yet they often find it difficult to accept being loved and acknowledged for who they really are.
What is the Fear of Intimacy?

We may be tolerant of realizing our dreams and desires in fantasy, but very often we are intolerant of having them fulfilled in reality.
What is the Fear of Intimacy?

• “Love—kindness, affection, sensitive attunement, respect, companionship—is not only difficult to find, but is even more challenging for many people to accept and tolerate. ”

• Many people are unaware that being loved or especially valued makes them feel angry and withholding.

Reasons We Defend Against Love

What are we afraid of?

- Arouses anxiety and makes us feel vulnerable
- Arouses sadness and painful feelings from the past
- Provokes a painful identity crisis
- Disconnects people from a “fantasy bond” with their parents
- Arouses guilt in relation to surpassing a parent
- Stirs up painful existential issues
Real love makes us feel anxious and vulnerable.

Love threatens longstanding psychological defenses formed early in life in relation to emotional pain and rejection, leaving a person feeling more vulnerable.
Letting ourselves fall in love means taking a risk.

A new relationship is uncharted territory, and most of us have natural fears of the unknown.

We’re trusting another person, which makes us feel exposed and vulnerable.

We tend to believe that the more we care, the more we can get hurt.
Don’t get too close.

People just wind up getting hurt.
“Enemies, yes, but doesn’t your moat also keep out love?”
Why do we push love away?

On an unconscious level, we may sense that if we did not push love away, the whole world as we have experienced it would be shattered, and we would not know who we were.
Psychological Defenses

◇ Being loved by someone we love and admire threatens our defenses.

◇ Habits we’ve long had that allow us to feel safe, self-focused or self-contained

◇ Adaptations to our early environment that aren’t adaptive in our adult lives
Real love stirs arouses sadness from the past

- The ways we were hurt in previous relationships, starting from our childhood, have a strong influence on:
  - Why we choose the partners we do
  - How we perceive the people we get close to
  - How we act in our romantic relationships

- Old, negative dynamics may make us wary of opening ourselves up to someone new.

- We may steer away from intimacy, because it stirs up feelings of hurt, loss, anger or rejection.
“When you long for something, like love, it becomes associated with pain,” the pain you felt at not having it in the past.

- Pat Love, Ph.D., Author  The Truth About Love
Attachment Theory and Research

“Attachment underlies later capacity to make effectual bonds,” particularly with marital bonds and trouble parenting.

Adult attachment ‘styles’: Regions in a two-dimensional space

Love provokes a painful identity crisis

- Both giving and receiving love tend to disrupt the negative, yet familiar, ways we have of thinking about ourselves.
- Many of us struggle with underlying feelings of being unlovable.
- We have trouble feeling our own value and believing anyone could really care for us.
But I said "yes"! What's wrong?

It's the sudden change. I'm accustomed to being rejected.
We feel like the “bad kid” to justify how we were treated and to maintain sense of control.
We all have a “critical inner voice,” which acts like a cruel coach inside our heads that tells us we are worthless or undeserving of happiness.
The critical inner voice refers to a well-integrated pattern of destructive thoughts toward our selves and others. The “voices” that make up this internalized dialogue are at the root of much of our maladaptive behavior.

This internal enemy fosters inwardness, distrust, self-criticism, self-denial, addictions and a retreat from goal-directed activities.

The critical inner voice effects every aspect of our lives: our self-esteem and confidence, and most importantly, our personal and intimate relationships.
Common “Voices” in Relationships

Voices About Yourself:

- You’ll never find someone who understands you.
- Don’t get too hooked on her.
- He doesn’t really care about you.
- She is too good for you.
- You’ve got to keep him interested.
- As soon as she gets to know you, she’ll reject you.
- You’ve got to be in control.
- It’s your fault if he gets upset.
- Don’t be too vulnerable, or you’ll just wind up getting hurt.
Common “Voices” in Relationships

Voices About Your Partner:

- Men are so insensitive, unreliable, selfish.
- Women are so fragile, needy, indirect.
- He only cares about being with his friends.
- Why get so excited? What’s so great about her anyway?
- He’s probably cheating on you.
- He just can’t get anything right.
Voices about Relationships:

Relationships never work out. People always just wind up getting hurt.
How the Voice Process Impacts Relationships

Self-Punishing Voice Process in Relationships:

EXAMPLE:

No one will ever love you. He/She will never care about you. You’ll just wind up alone.
How the Voice Process Impacts Relationships

Self-Soothing Voice Process in Relationships:

EXAMPLE:

You’re just fine on your own. You can take care of yourself. You don’t need anyone else. Don’t trust him/her.
Why do we listen to our inner critic?

- While these attitudes can be hurtful, over time, they have become engrained in us.
- As adults, we may fail to see them as an enemy.
- The thoughts are unpleasant but comfortable in their familiarity.
- When another person sees us differently from our voices, we may actually start to feel uncomfortable and defensive, as it challenges these long-held points of identification.
Love breaks a “Fantasy Bond” with our parents

Relationships:
- Ultimate symbol of growing up
- Represent starting our own lives
- Symbolize a parting from our family
- Letting go on an emotional level
- Differentiating from negative dynamics that plagued our early relationships and shaped our identity
Separation Theory

Robert Firestone. Ph.D.

- Integrates psychoanalytic and existential systems of thought
- Two kinds of emotional pain
  - Interpersonal
  - Existential
- The core conflict
- Formation of defenses in childhood
- Defended versus undefended lifestyles
- The Fantasy Bond and the Critical Inner Voice
We are rarely fully aware of how we defend against these existential fears. We may even try to rationalize to ourselves a million reasons we shouldn’t be in the relationship. However, the reasons we give may have workable solutions, and what’s really driving us are those deeper fears of loss.

Love stirs up existential fears
Love arouses guilt in surpassing a parent
With real joy comes real pain

- Any time we fully experience true joy or feel the preciousness of life on an emotional level, we can expect to feel a great amount of sadness.

- Many of us shy away from the things that would make us happiest, because they also make us feel pain.

- We cannot selectively numb ourselves to sadness without numbing ourselves to joy. When it comes to falling in love, we may be hesitant to go “all in,” for fear of the sadness it would stir up in us.

Behavior Patterns: Ways We Defend Against Love

In Relationships:

- Play the victim
- Withhold (interest, affection, sexuality, shared activities)
- Lash out/ pick fights/push away partner
- Shut down
- Distort
- Project
- Withdraw into fantasy (form over substance)
- Become critical of our partner
Behavior Patterns:
Ways We Defend Against Love

When Single:

- Keep ourselves out of reach
- Feel like we aren’t good enough
- Isolate ourselves
- Fail to be open
- Criticize all possible choices
Factors that Contribute to Relationship Distress

- Selection
- Distortion
- Provocation

“I know. But I think I can change him.”
And then a horrible ogre came along—you know the type: weak chin, thinning hair...
“When I fell in love with you, suddenly your eyes didn’t seem close together, now they seem close together again.”
Kiss me.

Again? I kissed you three times last week.
“You may well be from Mars, but the children and I are still from Westchester.”
Attachment and Relationships

• Many studies have shown that attachment anxiety and avoidance are related to deficits in caring for relationship partners and engaging in altruistic behavior more generally (e.g., Kunce & Shaver, 1994; Gillath et al., 2005).

• Anxious people tend to be self-focused when engaged in supposedly caring/altruistic actions, leading to intrusiveness, poor assessment of others’ actual needs, and personal distress.

• Avoidant people tend to be less interested in helping others and to derogate needy others. They are relatively deficient in the domain of compassion and love.
Is Your Attachment Style Affecting Your Relationship?

Secure Attachment: Securely attached adults tend to be more satisfied in their relationships.

Anxious-Preoccupied Attachment: People with an anxious attachment tend to be desperate to form a fantasy bond. Instead of feeling real love or trust toward their partner, they often feel emotional hunger.
Is Your Attachment Style Affecting Your Relationship?

Dismissive-Avoidant Attachment: People with a dismissive-avoidant attachment have the tendency to emotionally distance themselves from their partner. They’re often the other half of a Fantasy Bond.

Fearful-Avoidant Attachment: People with a fearful-avoidant attachment live in an ambivalent state in which they’re afraid of being too close to or too distant from others.
Formation of a Fantasy Bond

◇ A “fantasy bond” describes an illusion of connection between a couple that is substituted for feelings of real love and intimacy.

◇ Forming a fantasy bond is an often unconscious act of self-parenting and self-protection, in which two people become pseudo-independent, replacing the real relating involved in being in love with the form of being a “couple.”

◇ The degree of reliance on a fantasy bond is proportional to the degree of frustration and pain experienced in a person’s developmental years.
Most people have a fear of intimacy and at the same time are terrified of being alone. Their solution is to form a fantasy bond – an illusion of connection and closeness – that allows them to maintain emotional distance while assuaging loneliness and, in the process, meeting society’s expectations regarding marriage and family.
Manifestations of a Fantasy Bond

- Withholding
- Polarization of parent-child ego states
- Idealization/denigration of the other
- Loss of independence
- Form versus substance

Part 3: How can you overcome fear of intimacy?
“Before you chop off my head, don’t you think we should see a counsellor?”
The Importance of Connection

Studies show that love and relationships lead to:

1. Faster healing
2. Reduced pain
3. A sharper mind
4. More success
   (as a leader and in business)
5. Decreased stress
6. Increased happiness
7. Longer lives

“Romantic love,” characterized by “intensity, engagement and sexual interest,” is associated with marital satisfaction, well-being, high self-esteem and relationship longevity.

“Passionate” or “obsessive love” has the same features as romantic love but also includes feelings of uncertainty and anxiety. Passionate/obsessive love works well in short-term relationships, but it hurts long-term relationships.

“Companion-like love” leads to only moderate satisfaction in both short-term and long-term relationships.

“Couples should strive for love with all the trimmings… Couples who’ve been together a long time and wish to get back their romantic edge should know it is an attainable goal that, like most good things in life, requires energy and devotion.”

- Researcher Bianca P. Acevedo, Ph.D.

Romantic love can last in a long-term relationship and keep both people happy.
"Defining love in behavioral terms is a challenging undertaking."

- “In our view, actions that fit the description of a loving relationship are expressions of affection, both physical and emotional; a wish to offer pleasure and satisfaction to one’s mate; tenderness, compassion, and sensitivity to the needs of the other; a desire for shared activities and pursuits; an appropriate level of sharing of one’s possessions; an ongoing, honest exchange of personal feelings; and the process of offering concern, comfort, and outward assistance for the loved one’s aspirations.”

- “Love includes feeling for the other that goes beyond a selfish or self-centered interest in the loved one. As such, love nurtures and has a positive effect on each person’s self-esteem and sense of well-being. Love is truth and never involves deception, because misleading another person fractures his or her sense of reality and is therefore a serious human rights violation that adversely affects mental health.”

Dating Outside Your Comfort Zone

• Identify Your Pattern

Look at your relationships history:
- What are the qualities you typically look for in a partner? Are there certain negative qualities that seem to show up?
- Do you have a pattern of choosing a person with specific traits only to end up dissatisfied with them?
- Do your relationships seem to always break up for the same reasons?

• Take chances
• Listen to your friends
• Don't listen to your inner coach
• Hang in there
The Firestone Voice Scale for Couples

Instructions

All people experience thoughts that are critical towards themselves and others. For example, when a person is worried about his (her) relationship, he (she) might think:
“You’d better hang onto him (her). This may be your last chance. You may never get anybody again.”

Or a person might have critical thoughts about a potential partner:
“Don’t get involved. You might get hurt because he (she) is so unreliable.”

Negative thoughts are a part of everyone’s thinking process. Please indicate the frequency with which you experience the following thoughts by circling the corresponding number.

1 – NEVER 2 – RARELY 3 – ONCE IN A WHILE 4 – FREQUENTLY 5 – MOST OF THE TIME

Fore example, you think or say to yourself:

1 2 3 4 5 “You’re unattractive. Why should she (he) want to go out with you?”

1. You’d better put on a good front. Put your best foot forward or he (she) won’t be interested.
   1 2 3 4 5

2. You’d be better off on your own.
   1 2 3 4 5

3. He (She) doesn’t give a damn about you.
   1 2 3 4 5

4. He (She) never spends time with you. He (She) is always with his (her) friends/family.
   1 2 3 4 5

5. He (She) doesn’t want to hear your opinions, so keep them to yourself.

Voice Therapy

Cognitive/ Affective/ Behavioral/ Approach

Robert W. Firestone Ph.D.
The Therapeutic Process in Voice Therapy

Step I
The person is articulates his or her self-attacks in the second person and expresses any feelings that arise.
Step II

- The person discusses reactions to saying their voices.
- The person tries to understand the relationship between these attacks and early life experiences.
Step III

• The person answers back to the voice attacks.
• The person makes a rational statement about how he or she really is.
Step IV

The person develops insight about how the voice attacks are influencing his or her present-day behaviors.
The Therapeutic Process in Voice Therapy

Step V

- The person collaborates with the therapist to plan changes in these behaviors.
- The person is encouraged to not engage in self-destructive behaviors and to increase the positive behaviors these negative thoughts discourage.

If you are interested in attending a voice therapy training or in getting training materials please contact jina@glendon.org or visit www.glendon.org.
The Therapeutic Process with Couples

- Between sessions, couples are encouraged to reveal their negative thoughts to each other when they occur during the sex act.
- They are encouraged to maintain physical contact while “giving away” self attacks and critical thoughts.
- Results of these experiences are discussed in subsequent sessions.
Ways to Overcome Your Fear of Love

1. Recognize your fear.
2. Look at your history.
3. Challenge your critical inner voice.
4. Challenge your defenses.
5. Feel your feelings, but do the right thing.
6. Be vulnerable.
7. Date outside your comfort zone.
8. Focus on what you give over what you get.
There can be no intimacy—emotional intimacy, spiritual intimacy, physical intimacy—without vulnerability. One of the reasons there is such an intimacy deficit today is because we don’t know how to be vulnerable. It’s about being honest with how we feel, about our fears, about what we need, and, asking for what we need. Vulnerability is a glue that holds intimate relationships together.

- Brene Brown, Ph.D., Author  The Power of Vulnerability
Differentiation

Step 1: Break with internalized thought processes, i.e., critical, hostile attitudes toward self and others

Step 2: Separate from negative personality traits assimilated from one’s parents

Step 3: Relinquish patterns of defense formed as an adaptation to painful events in one’s childhood

Step 4: Develop one’s own values, ideals, and beliefs rather than automatically accepting those one has grown up with
Ways to Help Your Relationships

• Reveal destructive thought processes to each other.
• Keep a journal. Out your inner coach.
• Set goals for the relationship.
• Monitor your behavior.
• Use the tools:
  - Disarm
  - Be generous
  - Challenge withholding
  - Don’t board the train of destructive thoughts
  - Recognize your triggers
  - Let go of resentments
